

China's 301 Retaliation Product Scope
FOR REFERENCE PURPOSES ONLY

China has imposed retaliatory tariffs on specific products from the United States in response to the United States' tariffs on Chinese products following the Section 301 investigation into China's acts, policies, and practices related to technology transfer, intellectual property, and innovation.

The below table includes a list of all products covered by the retaliatory tariff measure, based on China's national tariff schedule classification. For official information, please click on the links in the table to the China's official announcements and China's product lists (in Chinese). Please use the 'Find' function ('Ctrl + F') to search for a specific HS code.

U.S. companies can search for English language product descriptions for specific Harmonized System (HS) tariff codes covered by China's retaliatory tariffs at <http://hs.e-to-china.com/>. This site is authorized by China's General Administration of Customs; however, only the Chinese language description is definitive, and any actual tariff classification and assessment of duties is determined by the China's General Administration of Customs.

On December 14, 2018, China announced that it would temporarily suspend retaliatory tariffs imposed on U.S. autos and auto parts for the period of three months, from January 1, 2019 to March 31, 2019. The 211 products covered by this temporary suspension are highlighted below. On March 31, 2019 China extended this suspension until December 15, 2019 as mentioned below.
